

Chair in International Business, Henley Business School

We are seeking to appoint a Chair in International Business. The role will entail providing academic leadership within the Department of International Business and Strategy, and helping to drive research excellence.

For 40 years the University of Reading has helped define the research agenda in the field of international business. The John H. Dunning Centre for International Business is a dedicated research centre within International Business and Strategy at the Henley Business School, University of Reading. The school aspires to remain at the forefront of the field and the Dunning Centre stands as one of the world's premier research centres in the field. Internationally renowned members of the Centre include Professor Chris Brewster, Professor Mark Casson, Professor Davide Castellani, Professor Rajneesh Narula and Professor Alain Verbeke.

The role will entail providing academic leadership within the school of International Business and Strategy, and help drive research excellence. Applicants should have an established international reputation and a strong track record of excellent research and publications. Furthermore, the applicant would be expected to undertake knowledge transfer activities and lead collaborative research projects within the Henley Business School, the wider University and beyond. The applicant will have experience in developing funding strategies, generating income and managing external research grants. Both the school and the Dunning Centre take an eclectic view of International Business, and we welcome applicants from all sub-disciplines of International Business and Strategy.
